Gazprom	The only comments I have had on this internally is whether the information is held by DCC, and therefore not necessary in UKlink?
npower	Npower rejects this change based on the following: Although the intention behind the change is the same for Electricity, the solution isn't like for like. For Electricity, MPAS facilitates information from Supplier to Supplier to share the IHD install status on a CoS. The SPAA CP solution only enables Supplier to Transporter, following the update from MAM. There is no return obligation or facility for Xoserve to supply the information the other way. This CP therefore only facilitates IHD status communication between MAM and Supplier, so the value of the change is questionable
